The New Face of Fascism in America, Incorporated

ABSTRACT

El Presidente Donald Trump ha designado sus jefes de agencias del gobierno y sus consejeros de la seguridad nacional, la economía, y la política. Hay consternación general entre la gente norteamericano que no votaron para Trump. Los siguientes ensayos en inglés son comentarios sarcásticos y satíricos sobre los designados que son mayormente banqueros y militares. La segunda parte "President Trump and His Swamp Creatures" es un comentario bien sarcástico. En su campaña Trump denunció los banqueros y prometió a "limpiar el swampo" de Washington. En ese escenario el Presidente ha designado Hannibal Lector como el Chef Jefe de la Casa Blanca y le ordenó la preparación de una cena especial para los jefes de agencia. El carácter Hannibal Lector es de películas famosas sobre un hombre que cocina y come partes del cuerpo humano.

The President and All His Men

I, Dalio de la Indignación Janssen, satirist second class, frankly confess that I was taken in by news reports on Mr. Trump. My original thoughts about President Elect Trump were based on his TV performances and the internet writings of liberal-left pundits. I and millions of Americans may have been seriously misled, Donald is just an actor playing a leading role in the Great Drama of Making America Great Again. For more than a year The Donald seemed to be endlessly trumpeting on TV day and night. After some months of viewing performances on CNN, BBC, and Fox News I came to smile at Jon Stewart's labeling of the Big D as "FuckFaceVonClownstick." That seemed to be more appropriate than another name bantered around, "Trumpenstein", which could be confused with the Steins of Wall Street. We know that the President is lacking in anti-

Semitism. The number one seat beside the President at his Inaugural was reserved for Sheldon Adelson, America's primer Zionist and a major donor to the Trump campaign. If Frankenstein was meant, it is clear that Trump never bit female necks for blood; he just kissed the ladies while groping the more interesting parts. A variation on the Stein was Drumpfunstein. No doubt he likes to have his fun as a serial groper. Trump is clearly heterosexual. He categorically stated "I did not have sexual Relations with that Russian."

Some say that Trump is a serial racist, but after all he is only deporting brown people and building the Great Wall of Trump which will make Amerikka safer and coincidentally whiter. Those who look at his national security and military appointments are talking about a Herr Twitler doing a Trumpaclysm and that we will all go down with the Trumptanic. At the time it seemed to me that his staged mannerisms, wild statements, populist rantings, and bragging about his success as an entrepreneur indicated that Billionaire Trump had delusions of grandeur. He was thought of by some as a supercilious braggadocio. Others referred to our President as the Godfather. A psychiatrist wants to add Trumpitis to the list of mental illnesses.

It was made to appear that Trump stood tall in his misogynic and racist political incorrectness. His stage mannerisms demonstrated his prowess as an actor. His yellow hair waved in the blow of his words and the frantic clapping of his audience; his face gave away alternate expressions of rage, mockery, and self-congratulation. His projected image was that of a real Stand Up Cat, as opposed to Hillary Clinton as a Lay Down Kitten for financial and corporate interests, unfit to rule and should be in prison. Trump strutted around in baggy pants with what one complaining Beauty Queen said was his embarrassing four inch erection. (She recently filed suite for inadequate performance and breach of contract). Still his star status gave him the right to "grab women by the pussy." Trump surely does like to fondle female kittens, but had a hard time getting it up for Hillary. No doubt that Trump likes to give the finger to women, but also to the Old Patrician Republican Establishment (some said even to common decency). It's my way or no way he said to the Plutocracy. We are going to build a system that will forever preserve capitalism, to be engineered by keptocrats and warlords. His policy on the rape of nature was capsulized as "fuck the environment." Anyone paying attention could arrive at the conclusion that Trump is more than a serial groper and tit gazer; he is a schoolyard bully with the USA and now the world as his turf. For Ameri~~ka~~na, he plans to be Der Fuhrer and for the world domain, Emperor Trump The First.

These were my thoughts about Sir Donald up to November 9, 2016. After that date he began to appoint his cabinet officials and White House and National Security Advisors.

Trump had promised the many voters insecure of their status in a changing world and those being downgraded in privilege that he would drain the Washington

Beltway Swamp of insiders and plutocrats. Then I began to follow the alternative news on the internet. Many were saying that Trump's cabinet and advisor appointment are an astounding array of Generals enamored of war (but who never ended nor won a war), the richest of the rich, and the most unqualified imaginable to head agencies or give wise counsel. The Left pointed at appointees that included Christian fundamentalists aiming for theocracy, misogynists, climate-change deniers, conspiracy-theory advocates, war mongers, and especially persons at the heart of the power of financial capital; in short, choosing from within the .001% of the 1% to make up a cabinet and set of advisors. Trump may decide to shut down this so-called alternative media where such lies are daily sent out all over the world. Writers continue to say that his appointments are the fiercest among the dangerous swamp rats and that we will indeed be governed by bankocrats and militarists. Some of this propaganda was picked up abroad. Even the conservative German newspaper Der Spiegel depicted a caricature of Trump as a meteor beaming toward earth. The caption read "Das Ende Der Welt!" A Swiss paper had a front page depiction of Trump behind a surprised lady groping under her dress. Trump's expression of pleasure changed to consternation in the next cartoon in which Putin is reaching from behind to grope Trump's testicles. The caption read "Donald Trump denies being blackmailed." ("Donald Trump bestreitet erpressbar su sein.")

Trump promised a new deal for American workers and the middle class, so injured by free trade. Trump has created a new Office of Trade that presumably will pull out of or renegotiate trade deals such as NAFTA, CAFTA, and Agreements with Pacific countries and Europe that Obama was pushing. One wonders how his office will deal with all the financial elites, free-traders, and globalists with firm commitments to neoliberalism that Trump has appointed to the highest posts. Critics point out that the betrayal of the party base by reneging on promises in nothing new for either Republicans or Democrats.

An objective view of Trump's appointments leads to some conclusions, perhaps encouraging, to many.

Americans can now sleep in peace and comfort without fear of terrorist attacks. President Trump has appointed two outstanding persons to take charge of bringing an end to terrorism by doing in all those suspected of terrorism. Trump understood that we need a tough military man as head of Homeland Security and a no-nonsense Attorney General. We American's have been subject to insecurity for too many years. Among their first acts was a ban on any entry to the U.S. from countries with large Muslim populations.

John Kelly, a retired General, was for a time in charge of the Guantanamo prison that housed our very worst terrorist enemies, is our new Director of Homeland Security. When Guantanamo prisoners staged a protest hunger strike Kelly knew just what to do, forced feeding to keep them alive and responsive to interrogation. It is unclear whether the forced feeding was by way of rectal insertions, as the CIA had practiced in other dark sites. De-hydration was not a torture technique. The prisoners got plenty of water to drink in their frequent interrogation by water boarding. He and the circle of advisors moved quickly to keep potential terrorists out by imposing a ban on Muslim travel to the U.S. and declare absolutely that the Great Wall of Trump will be built on the Mexican border. Initially at least the Federal Courts did not agree on a travel ban on Muslims.

The other appointee to be proud of that will work to stop terrorism is Jeff Sessions as Attorney General. Sessions will surely appoint a new head of the FBI. This agency spent nearly half its budget on infiltrating Muslim organizations in the U.S. and trying to entrap terrorists, but somehow never got a single conviction. We can assume that the FBI and Justice Department will invent more effective means of doing in terrorists than bringing them to trial.

Sessions has been accused of being a racist. While the charge goes way back to allegedly racist remarks he made that disqualified him from appointment as a federal judge, he has mellowed with his years as Senator from the Confederacy of Alabama. Nevertheless, his background and thinking will surely lead to actions that contribute to the eclipse of the potential terrorist group, Black Lives Matter, just as the Black Panthers were taken care of in the 1960s. No doubt the Justice Department will now work with local police forces to step up the containment and control of ghetto crime, murder, and drug trafficking. Sessions has indicated that stepping up the War on Drugs will be a priority. In the police containment work there will be special programs to stop and frisk young black men who might be traffickers. Police shooters of resisters will be decorated.

The War on Drugs will also be a main weapon to deal with immigrants, most of whom are dealers or addicts, and to be jailed. Many are also serial rapists, deflowering our young native-born white girls. Homeland Security will cooperate in building more private prisons and internment camps. To be on the safe side, Sessions and Trump favor a policy that all illegal immigrants be deported, rounding up first all Muslims and Mexicans, illegal or not. Extending deportation to all non-whites is under consideration. The FBI will be uncharged with a special project to tag and deal with white agitators and subversives, traitors all of whom can be considered sympathizers of terrorism. Together with building the Great Wall of Trump on our Southern Border and ending the Mexico part of NAFTA that takes jobs away from Americans, we can expect an end to the flow of drugs, rapists, and terrorism and a curtailment of civil disorder.

After the events of women's demonstrations on January 21, 2017, President Trump has specifically ordered the Attorney General to keep close tabs on women's groups and to disrupt their activity. The AG issued an internal memo encharging the FBI with a special project to tag and deal with white agitators and subversives, male and female, all of whom can be considered sympathizers of terrorism and completely out of step with making America great again. The FBI and Homeland Security both are encouraging private militia to assist in taking care of domestic subversion.

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) Director appointment, Mike Pompeo, has said nothing about torture techniques, so we can assume he has convictions that there are means of extracting intelligence that have more efficacy and are less controversial. For example, lining suspects against a wall and threatening firing squad death has never been defined as torture. Until now the CIA has been confined to carrying out American policy fighting terrorism and regime change abroad. The appointed Deputy Director, Gina Haspel, another of the female appointees that Trump does not have to ask to lay down. She was head of a CIA Black Site practicing torture in Thailand. Now it seems that the new Director wants to expand agency activities, especially the National Security Agency, NSA, to the home front. In the Wall Street Journal Mr. Pompeo said, "Until now the CIA has been confined to carrying out American policy abroad. Legal and bureaucratic impediments to surveillance should be removed." Naturally, CIA vigilance on the home front and throughout the world will be stepped up in order to make America safe from terrorism and subversion. The CIA can perhaps do more to "Make American Great Again" than another other agency. Abroad, the CIA has vast experience in regime change of countries who don't accept American Greatness. That Pompeo is taken seriously is confirmed by the governments of Cuba, Venezuela, Ecuador, and Bolivia that have communicated a heads up to each other and installed the latest unbreakable encryption technology, an invention by a 16 year old student at the Havana Institute of Technology. These countries pledged mutual support to combat U.S. efforts at regime change. Cuban leader Raul Castro explained to the other heads of Latin American states that if Cuba could survive 57 years of embargo and terrorists attacks all Bolivarians can resist the coming aggression.

Pompeo was a prominent Republican on the Congressional Committee that went after Hillary Clinton for her negligence in allowing the 2011 attack on the American Ambassador to Libya in the conquered oil province of Benghazi. The Committee knew that Benghazi was a CIA station supporting and arming insurgents in Syria and well as Libya. For the record they got Clinton to deny that jihadist grouping for Syria or Libya were being aided by the Ambassador and CIA personal. Pompeo supports with great enthusiasm and dedication CIA assistance to Islamic insurgents, regime change in Syria and Latin America, and combating terrorism by any means throughout the world. This policy may lead to greater war in the short run, but in the end America will have recaptured its leadership to bring peace and democracy to the world and greatness to America.

General Flynn appointed as the top National Security official got off to a bad start by prematurely talking to the Russians about removing sanctions. He felt constrained to resign.

Trump's choice for Secretary of State was a brilliant move. For Secretary the nominee is Rex Tillerson, former CEO of Exxon-Mobil. Trump described Tillerson as a "world class player." It appears that Tillerson is a buddy to Trump's closest friend abroad, Vladimir Putin, who is keen on oil deals. In his campaign, Trump made a big point of forcing NATO to pay for their own defense. This policy and oilman Tillerson as Secretary could be a major step in ending the Cold War with Russia, as well as reducing the military budget for the cost of all those American missiles surrounding Russian borders placed there by Bush and Obama. Now the compliant neo-fascist regime in the Ukraine will help Europe keep Russia subdued. Should the Russians not play the game our President can lob Intercontinental missiles right on the Kremlin. But we hope that the Cold War will indeed calm down. On the other hand, some analysts claim that Trump and Tillerson will heat up a not-so-cold-war with China, a country that has been stealing the good jobs in American industry and building military bases on rocks in the South China Sea, where Tillerson's has interests in oil findings. One of Trump's first phone calls was with the President of Taiwan assuring him that there will be a review of the long standing policy of viewing Taiwan as a province of China. America needs at least one strong enemy to justify all that increased budget for the Pentagon and enhance the culture of fear in the homeland.

To have an oil magnet as Secretary of State is complementary to other cabinet appointees in charge of our national energy policy, especially Scott Pruitt, head of the Environmental Protection Agency. This appointment was complemented with Cathy McMorris Rodgers to the Interior Department. These appointees as well as the President's Council of Economic Advisors will do much for the sustainable, job generating development of the country. (In other writings I referred to "sustainable development" and "degenerative development," but why not give our President and his Advisors the benefit of the doubt). Clearly clean energy is but a very long term goal. In the meanwhile it is necessary to make large, job generating investments in oil exploration off-shore, in the Arctic, and everywhere. Fracking for natural gas, shale oil mining and pipelines to refineries, and clean coal will be development goals. Corporations in these activities may receive a bonus to the general corporate tax cut designed to encourage corporations to invest and provide jobs. Scott Pruitt thinks, along with most of the other Trump appointees, that global warming is a myth. His home state Oklahoma, he explained, has experienced continuing cold winters and snow storms--so much for the nonsense of climate change. He also disclaimed any relationship between the hundreds of earthquakes that have shaken much of the state with fracking for natural gas.

The new Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Director prefers to eliminate the agency as an unnecessary fetter on business activity (a goal shared by all cabinet appointees in their own jurisdictions, except the military and CIA), but first plans to drain all swamps so that no terrorist or environmental crazy can wade into one and hide from federal authorities. His main job will be to entrench energy policy. After that the EPA can be allowed to wither (the Republican legislation in Congress to abolish the EPA may be just a bit premature). The Transition Team has asked that a list of all the personnel of the EPA who have been working on climate change be sent to the President's Office. Additionally the State Department has been asked to list all employees who focus on gender equality and ending violence against women. Presumably, lay-offs of these superfluous employees will help reduce bloating bureaucracy and unnecessary expenditure on programs based on false premises. We need to build up more our military to make America safe again. Also anything about climate change or women's rights are to be eliminated from the websites of the agencies and the White House.

Cathy McMorris Rodgers is an excellent pick for the Director of the Interior Department. For too long, National Parks have been claimed by elitist outdoor enthusiasts like the Sierra Club as their exclusive domain. Rodgers advocates turning over National Parks to oil, gas, and mineral corporations for exploration and development. The nature freaks will just have to learn to skirt oil derricks and to marvel at the technology that makes magnificent open pit oil shale mines. This appointment too complements those of Secretaries of State and the Director of the EPA.

Some left-wing pundits are asking, "What happened to his promise to drain the swamp of Washington Insiders and Plutocrats, and especially Wall Street financiers." The appointment of many bankers to important cabinet posts is a little curious, given President Trump's criticism of Hillary Clinton's ties to Wall Street in general and Goldman Sachs in particular. It is well known that Goldman Sachs CEO Blankfein contributed large sums to Hillary's campaign and to the Clinton Foundation. Both Hillary and Bill Clinton gave talks at Goldman Sachs and were very nicely compensated (over two million dollars). It was expected that Hillary would be President and CEO Blankfein would then be appointed Secretary of the Treasury, and he in turn would recommend appointment of the head of the Federal Reserve, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Department of Commerce. At one point CEO Blankfein said, "If there's some secret international cabal, I've been left out of the party again." Just before the election Trump used an image of Blankfein in a TV ad to argue that insiders like him had ruined the lives of Americans to enrich themselves. Trump argued that a global power structure, with bankers at the center, had robbed the working class, striped the country of it is wealth, and put all the gain in corporations, political entities, and banks. Trump would "drain the swamp."

It is a strange world indeed, since it is mostly Goldman Sachs affiliates that are now filling key positions in the Trump Administration. Steve Mnuchin, former CEO of Goldman Sachs, will guard the Treasury. Mnuchin is the fourth Goldman Sachs Treasury Secretary in the last three presidencies, preceded by Bob Rubin, Lawrence Summers, and Hank Paulson. Mnuchin was also CEO of JP Morgan Chase. He participated in bringing about the Financial crisis of 2008 by being head of housing lender IndyMac that made risky loans easily packaged for Wall Street resale as mortgaged backed securities. Then with the crisis, IndyMac changed its name to Bank One that became a foreclosure specialist. He should be a good Treasury Secretary, after all his experience in foreclosure. If he can foreclose on a 90 year old widow over a $.27 missed payment, he should be able to ruthlessly foreclose on any Wall Street bank that has a negative balance sheet. Mnuchin could then become the receiver for over extended banks to be nationalized, Banks whose profits and executive bonuses derive from borrowing and speculative investments. Mnuchin should maybe be seen as a closet socialist.

Steve Bannon, Trump's chief strategist, may have a lot to do with banker appointments as he is a former Goldman Sachs executive, as is presidential adviser Anthony Scaramucci. In Germany, Bannon is viewed as Trump's Goebbels. Additionally, Goldman's Chief Operating Officer Gary Cohn is to head the post of Director of the National Economic Council. To round out the bankers appointments Blackstone Capital's CEO Stephen Schwarzman and JP Morgan Chase CEO Jamie Dimon are honchos in the Strategic and Policy Forum.

Wall Street lawyer Jay Clayton will be in charge of policing and deregulation of banking at the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). Surprisingly, no banker was appointed to the Department of Commerce, which went to the Steel Baron Wilbur Ross.

These appointments, together with all the Generals suggest a coup by the financial oligarchy, backed by the appointment of generals to key posts and tightening up the Security Apparatus. The Wall Street Journal said that Trump owes at least $1.85 billion in debt to 150 Wall Street firms. Is some quid pro quo expected with the power of the Presidency helping Wall Street with fat appointments? Only some left-wing conspiracy nuts would think like that or talk about a White House coup by financiers.

President Trump in his inaugural address stated, "...we are not merely transferring power from one administration to another or from one party to another, but we are transferring power from Washington, D.C. and giving it back to you, the people." From his campaign pronouncements it became clear that the people, Das Volk, consist of white people, especially men; white people of all classes, but guided and led by those who have proved themselves worthy to exercise the power to achieve greatness. The people are an organic whole, but must be cleansed of the inferior races.

Well what we can make of all the bankers. First, obviously Goldman Sachs execs were sampling what was blowin' in the wind, waiting to see wind direction and velocity and then switched sides. Perhaps in Trump's pronouncements about cleaning the swamp he meant Obama, Democrats who thought they had an in with the banking oligarchy, many of the staff of EPA and State Department do-gooders, and other agency personnel doing nothing but waste taxpayers money. Especially subject to the axe will be thousands of dead weights in the agencies having to do with government handouts to those who choose not to go out and get a good job and pay their own way.

Tom Price, Health and Human Services Secretary, who will defund Planned Parenthood, knows that a fertilized egg is a person and should not be murdered by abortion. Contraceptive services will be cut from health programs. Sale of contraceptive devices or pills will be heavily taxed and available only to married women whose husbands sign a consent form. As Representative from the Confederacy of Georgia, Price traded in medical related stocks while advancing legislation that avored the same companies, who show their gratitude by generous campaign contributions. It is said that Price will be principle stockholder in a private adoption company for all the unwanted babies. Sale price of newborns is said to be very high in some countries.

Ben Carson, Head of Housing and Urban Development, says of the fair housing rule, "This is what you see in Communist Countries." Since neurosurgeon Dr. Carson only knows how to give lobotomies to persons who can think rationally, he will leave it the bankers in the mortgage rip-off business to evolve housing policy.

In the educational sphere we are fortunate to have Betsy DeVos. She is determined to break teachers unions, change the public school system to one of Charter schools run for profit but paid from public funds. These measures will surely improve efforts to convert all education to those skills necessary to fill a job niche in a corporate hierarchy. Social Studies, art, and civics will be eliminated from curriculum as pointless if not potentially subversive. For athletic activity only football will be permitted, as this activity makes boys into men (although at some cost of brain injury to players). Girl cheerleading will be permitted as long as no bare legs are displayed.

Mr. Puzder, appointed to head the Labor Department, was CEO of fast food chains. His model of employee discipline and pay at fast food joints he expects to replicate in all industry and services. He wants to rename the agency the Ministry of Discipline.

Representative Mick Mulvaney (R-SC) will direct the Office of Management and Budget and has announced his intention to privatize Medicare. Management and Budget is required to program and report the cost of all Federal programs. In the case of the lease of National Park lands and public lands in general, exploration rights for oil, gas, and minerals will not be charged a fee and thus not appear as a cost. Some critics say this is unfair to the taxpayer, but others say that our energy policy, a cornerstone for economic recovery will create economic development and good jobs.

Among the last appointment to be made was former Georgia Governor Sonny Perdue. He does have an agricultural background. Perdue is a veterinarian and owned a grain and fertilizer business. His claim to fame was during the Georgia drought when he prayed for rain on the state house steps. Perdue may have an in with God because two years later Georgia had the most severe floods in state history. Still he denies extreme weather may have something to do with global warming, nor has he expressed any concern about agriculture's contribution to greenhouse gas emissions.

Well, all this seems pretty serious. But I did receive a message smuggled out of his cell in the CIA basement from my brother, Per Leonardo Janssen. He was recently sequestered while traveling abroad in response to an Interpol complaint of being a Terrorist Curmudgeon. Apparently, the arrest order was issued by Homeland Security. Fortunately, Per was assisted in messaging by his jailor who has ambitions of being a whistle blower. Per Janssen has a rather perverse sense of satirical comedy and wrote the next commentary on the President's appointees. As luck would have it (in the age of Trumpism luck is our only salvation) the whistle blower gave information about Per's location and treatment to the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU managed to find a federal judge that did not agree with Trump that curmudgeonism is equivalent to terrorism and ordered him released from custody. Shortly before disappearing, Per described his treatment in the CIA basement. "They knew I was a long time smoker so with my chronic pulmonary deficiency they had great fun with waterboarding. Then they burned my toes with lighted cigarettes and asked if I would like one. On release I found it prudent to hide from these guys. So I went back to South Dakota and found a cave in the badlands to hide in. My Lakota Sioux friends brought me dried jerky to eat and protected me from the FBI. While in hiding I had the opportunity to become a leader in the Dakota People's Liberation Organization. Meanwhile, I had time to write down the events at President Trump's gala dinner for his appointees."

President Trump and His Swamp Creatures

By February, 2017, Trump's Cabinet nominees were in place, as were the White House Staff and Presidential Advisors. There was much difficulty in the Cabinet approval process, driven both by Democrats in Congress and by Citizens emboldened by the massive demonstrations of January 20 and 21, 2017. There were some three million demonstrators worldwide, but many in the U.S. were illegals who got registered to rig elections.

Infuriated with all the criticism, the President decided that he would hold a Presidential Dinner. Surprisingly, it turned out that Trump's appointments, while taken seriously by many, and praised by the alt-right, was only a clever ruse by our President to show that he is really serious about his promises to clear the ambient of swamp rats. That's why Hannibal Lector, Trump's appointee as Chief White House Chef, was instructed to prepare a special Banquet.

The White House Chef was placed in charge of the menu and will personally oversee the preparation of a range of delicacies. The Presidential Dinner became known as the Last Supper for White House dignitaries.

Surely Chef Lector, experienced even in the culinary preparation of human body parts, will know what to do swamp rats. It is rumored that the Presidential Dinner will feature delectable side courses of a marine animal nature served with the best German Liebfraumilch and, Mussolini's favorite, fava beans in tomato sauce and the finest Chianti as a chaser.

Each Cabinet member will be served a side dish appropriate to their high office.

Hannibal has promised Trump that the Head of the Office of Trade appointee will be served at the Dinner a Mexican enchilada made with adulterated imported U.S. corn meal, stuffed and flavored with mescal worms and warmed with the exhaust of a Ford vehicle manufactured in Mexico. It was expected that after the Dinner, NAFTA and all existing trade agreements would be abrogated and that corporate sponsored globalization and neoliberalism will be short-circuited.

Another of his primary side dish will be the Wall Street banker's brain matter sautéed in hallucinogenic mushroom sauce. Chef Lector ran into a problem with some of the Goldman Sachs people because the brain grey matter had atrophied, so he scalped some younger executives from Bank of America and Wells Fargo. Enough grey matter was removed from all banker appointees so that they can walk and talk, but we no longer have to worry about their thinking up new schemes to fleece the public and reward the 1%. They all wear handsome hairpieces or Jewish skull caps to hide the incision scars on the tops of their heads that Hannibal had cut open to access brain matter.

From those appointed to social service agencies Hannibal's dishes will be based on blood drawn while undergoing a physical exam required by the President. The medical exam also requires that the middle finger of each will be amputated. This will make it impossible to be impolite to social service clients or to the President. Hannibal ground up the fingers and when mixed with the blood delectable blood sausages were made.

On the advice of Planned Parenthood, Hannibal decided that Tom Price of Health and Human Services will be served fertilized human eggs in placenta sauce as his main dish with the blood sausages made from abortion hemorrhage as a side plate, with the expectation that he will excuse himself from the feast and never be heard from again.

Hannibal decided that Head of the Labor Department, Puzder, already grossly overweight and suffering from diabetes, would have a fast food special, a triple decker hamburger with an oversized wonder bread roll and lots of catsup together with salt and cheese smothered French fries and a quart of Coca Cola. The food will be served by two former Trump beauty queens in skimpy bikinis. Presidential Advisor Steve Bannon objected to the presence of any women, clad or unclad. (The female Secretaries of Education and Interior were able to bypass the gender barrier because no white man favoring privatizing education and oil and mineral leases in National Parks could be found). Bannon read the Pres and Hannibal part of his article, "Would you rather that your child had Feminism or Cancer?" Also he cited his Breitbart news story, "Birth Control Makes Women Unattractive and Crazy." Hannibal recommended to Trump that Bannon be starved to death or sent back to Goldman Sachs (as a condition of their temporary employment at minimum wages, the beauty queens received a bonus once they agreed to a Presidential grope in the privacy of the kitchen).

Hannibal and Donald conferred at length about how to serve the Generals in the Department of Defense and many other agencies. Mike Flynn, National Security Advisor, was already ousted so thought was turned to James "Mad Dog" Mattis, Secretary of Defense. Gen. Mattis is also responsible for oversight of the Corp of Army Engineers that must grant approvals for pipelines. Trump got worried that there would be more Indian uprisings against the pipelines in North Dakota and elsewhere. The generals thought that pipelines were essential to national energy security and if this meant reviving the Indian Wars, so be it. How the nickname Mad Dog came about I don't know, but it may have originated after Corporal Manning released Iraq atrocity tapes to Wikileaks (Ms. Manning, I am sorry to report that the Prison Authorities have forwarded your male parts to Chef Hannibal, but am pleased to say that Hannibal has refused to use them in any way and that President Obama has pardoned you to time served for the public service crime of publicizing war crimes).

It was decided that the most appropriate side dish for generals would be roasted testicles in an egg vessel, bathed in hollandaise sauce and served on a tray decorated by all the service metals granted the lot. Unfortunately, General Mattis balls were so tough they had to be pressure cooked before serving. This was presumed due to his extensive stays in Iraq and Afghanistan where he overdid his sexual prowess by having nightly ventures into the private harems provided by those loyal locals he promoted to political position. In the end Hannibal and Trump decided that the balls were just too undigestible and that the Mad Dog deserved a more fitting fate. General Mattis commanded the November 2004 siege of Fallujah, Iraq that left 5,000 dead civilians. It was thought fitting that after castration he would be denied his last supper and deposited without ceremony in the mass grave of Fullujah victims. General John Kelley refused to eat his testicle delight. Eight security guards were necessary to force feed him. After the Dinner, he declared that he will head Homeland Security only long enough to see that the agency and all its stupid programs were dismantled.

It is expected that after Hannibal's specialties, what is left of Banker's brains will atrophy so that they can do no harm and that the eunuch generals will leave war to history and fight for peace.

Hannibal gave great thought to an appropriate dinner for President Trump. He decided the first course would be a Russian borscht soup with beets imported from Uzbekistan, with a drop of crude oil for consistency. To give the borscht true red color Hannibal imported frozen blood from jihadist fighters in Syria. The soup was spiked with a bit of Colombian cocaine provided by the Drug Czar and sprinkled with Afghan poppy seed provided by the CIA. To accompany the soup, the President was served a wine glass of Liebfraumilch, not from German Rhine grapes, but genuine mother's breast milk. Trump's next course was a Mexican enchilada stuffed with limburger cheese and wild swamp spinach (all leeches removed). For the first time in his outstanding career as Chef, Hannibal was stymied what to prepare as the President's main course. Hannibal finally hit upon the idea of extracting the egos from any maniacs that might compete for attention with President Trump and serving them raw with a jalapeño dip.

The Dinner did end on an unpleasant note. Some Chinese technicians had rigged the temperature control mechanism starting at 70 degrees F. After each cliché, threat, or nonsense verbiage the temperature increased from one to five degrees, depending upon the utterance. After one hour, everyone at the banquet began to sweat -- the temperature had reached 90F. The technicians called in said they could do nothing to lower the temperature, except bring in a lot of fans. People began to get worried when the thermometer registered 105F, removing all coats and ties. Finally, at 120 degrees, President Trump rose to express his regrets. He had received word that some joker was making a point about the certainty of global warming. Trump's yellow hair was plastered to his skull. Sweating profusely, the President slumped over the last of the Mexican enchilada and fainted. Vice President Mike Pence, a Christian fundamentalist, was also served fertilized human eggs in placenta sauce. He gave a hurried prayer for the welfare of the cabinet and asked that God Bless America and all that the brave country stands for. The D.C. emergency medical team was called in to remove the President and many of the guests. The black medical personnel could not contain their smirks.
